ABSTRACT

COMPONENT MODULAR SUMMER OUTDOOR KITCHEN

The present invention is directed to a Component modular summer outdoor kitchen assembly, which is a housing for a Bar-B-Q grill, with cut-outs for such additions as a refrigerator, doors, grills and miscellaneous inserts. It is consisting of five basic panels, or two modular units, arranges into different configurations, made solely of cementations materials and bonded with a waterproof mastic. No nails or screws are used in the panel construction. Panels are approximately one and one quarter inch thick, with a height of approximately thirty-six inches. The interior framework of the panels are three-quarter by two inches, and three quarter by four inches, for structural purposes. The assembly of the modular units would consist of stainless steel clips and pins in corners, acting as the only necessary assembly, giving the component modular summer outdoor kitchen a minimal set-up and break-down time, approximately five minute per unit.
